5 Places to Grab a Pre-Padres Game Bite

By Kalah Siegel | Photo: Andy Boyd | March 24, 2016

Watching the Padres play ball at Petco Park is an iconic S.D. experience encompassing food, drinks and atmosphere long before (and after) the first pitch is thrown. Sans the peanuts and cracker jacks this season and stack your pre and post-game lineup with the best bites and beverages Downtown has to offer. Batter up...

1. The newest place to spend dough is at Flour & Barley, housed in the historic Headquarters at Seaport Village. The new tenant hails from the competitive fine-dining realm of Las Vegas. Its mission? To put a gourmet twist on pizza and beer with housemade garnishes and brick oven expertise. While its roots may be in Sin City, the team hasn't wasted any time becoming acquainted with San Diego customs. "Housemade" meets SoCal's tough standards with locally sourced ingredients, including seafood fresh from the adjacent harbor and served in dishes like the shrimp risotto and calamari fritti. It's beer program—let's just say the 150 draft selection highlighting local crafts get's the S.D. stamp of approval. 789 W Harbor Dr., San Diego, 619.344.2900
